

Zana Photos

7-1

7-2

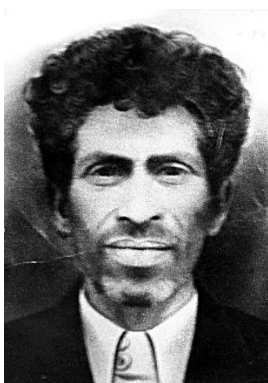

7-3

7-3a

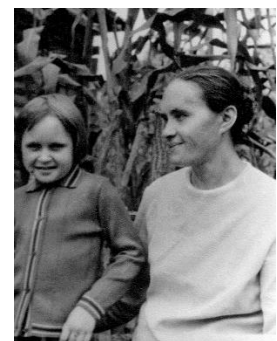

7-4

7-5

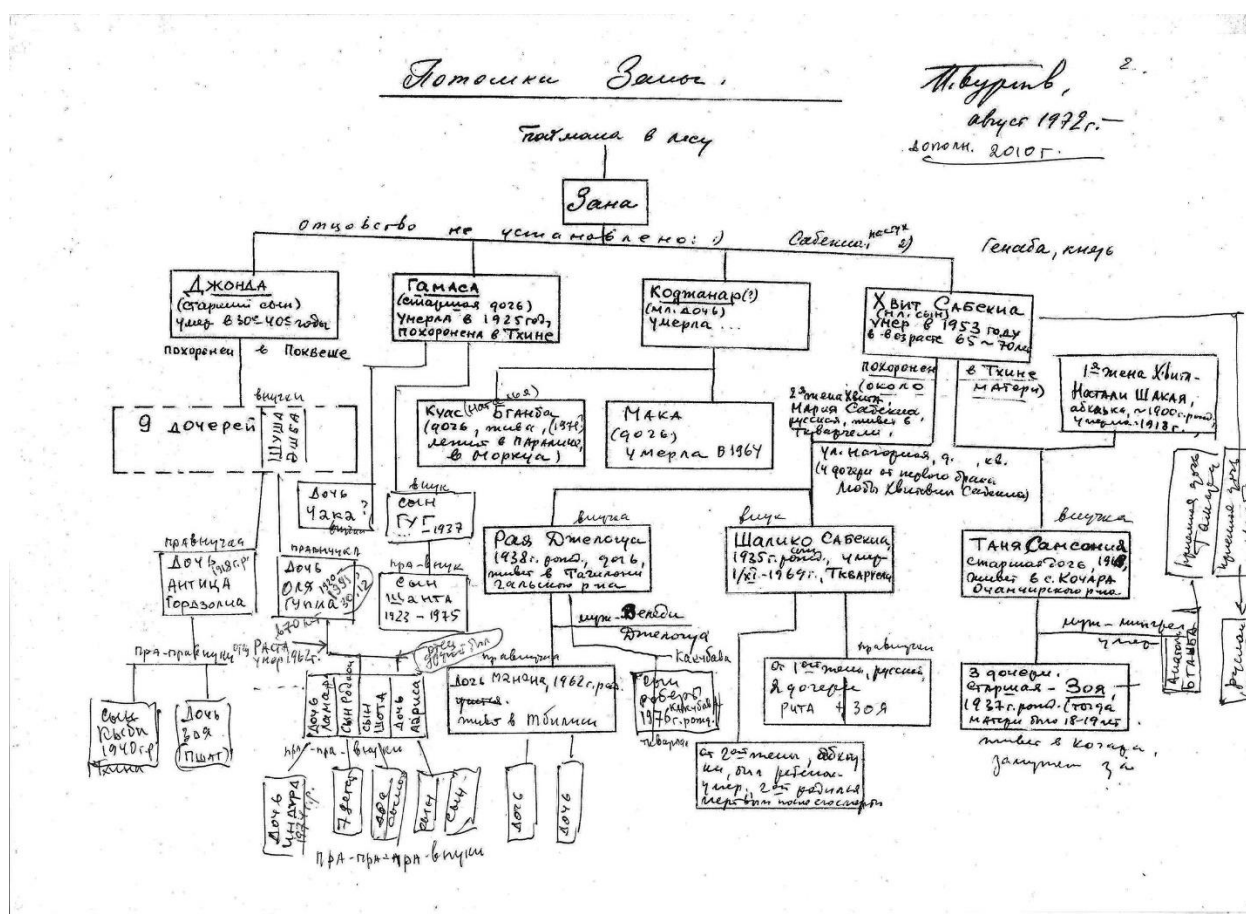

7-6

7-6a

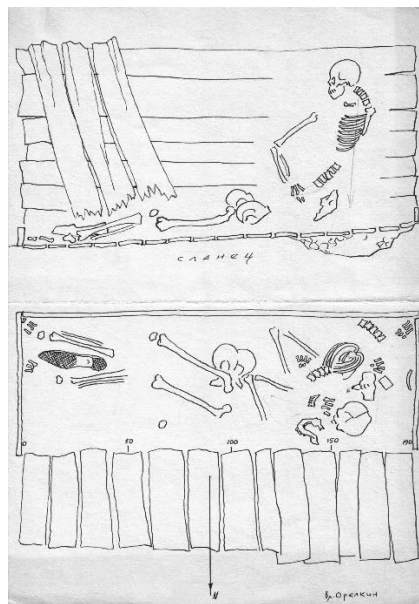

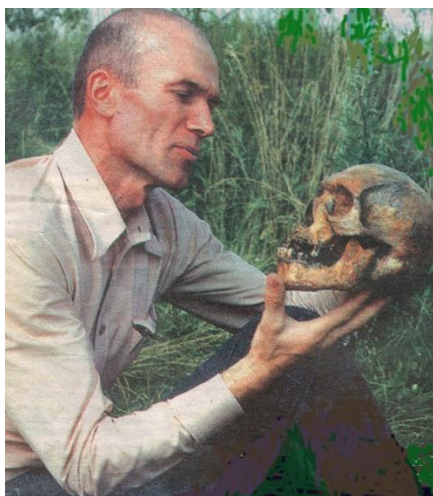

7-10

7-11

7-13

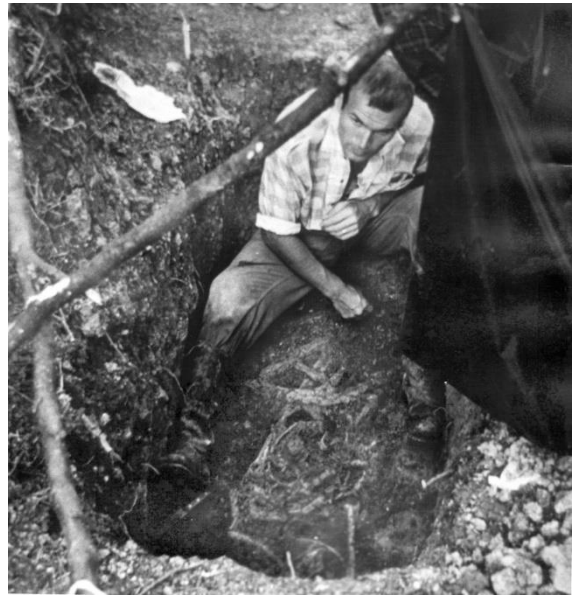

7-14

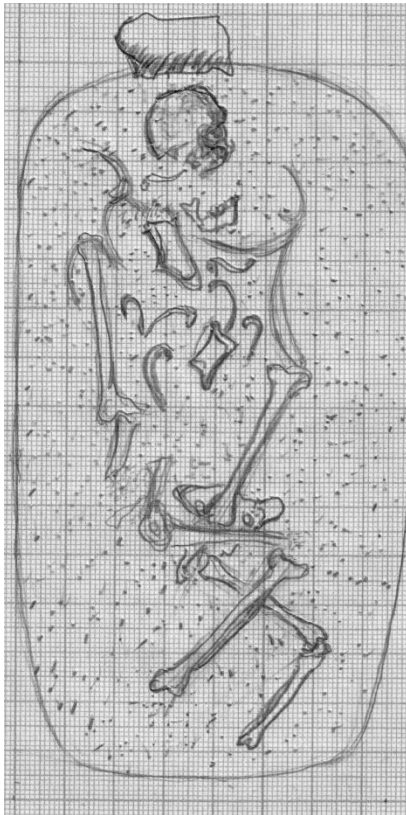

7-15

7-16

7-17

7-18

7-19

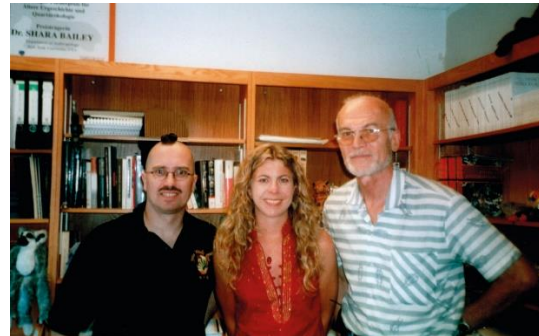

7-20

7-21

7-22

7-23

Captions to Zana Photos

7-1. Zana. Sketch by Lidya Burtseva

7-2. Zoologist Prof. Dr. Alexandr Mashkovtsev was the first of the researchers, who studied the Zana story in 1962

Shaliko, Khwit's son, as a soldier of the Soviet Army, and Shaliko's daughters Rita (left) and Zoya, 1976.

7-3 Khwit's daughter Tanya, 53 (born in 1918), as I saw her in 1971

7-3a Tanya's daughters and grandson, 1950s

7-4 One of Tanya's photos: note the shape of her ear

7-5 Khwit being a young man. The photo presented me by Tanya, his daughter

7-6, 7-6a Khwit's second wife Maria, their daughter Raya and granddaughter Manana

7-7 Raya's brother Shaliko, 7-7a Shaliko as a soldier of the Soviet Army (died in 1969)

7-8 Shaliko's daughter Rita (Margerit)

7-9 The draft of Zana's "family tree", as learned by Igor Burtsev in 1971

7-10 Igor Burtsev with an archaeologist Yuri Voronov, 1971

7-11 The first find: bones of a woman buried next by the Khwit's grave. Drawing by Vladimir Oryolkin, 1971

7-12 Igor Burtsev with Dr. Nikolay Burchak-Abramovich while excavating the Khwit's grave, 1971

7-13 Khwit's skull

7-14 Igor Burtsev with Khwit's skull, 1989

7-15 Excavations in 1975; 7-15 Igor Burtsev observing the bones in the grave

7-17 The woman's remains excavated, 1975. She was buried on her side with her legs bent. Drawing by Igor Burtsev

7-18 Khwit's and woman's skulls in comparison

7-19 Woman's skull of 1975, profile view

7-20 Drawing by Dr. Galina Lebedinskaya based on the unearthed skull

7-21 Raya with her son Robert, 1978

7-22 Our team met with Dr. Yuri Voronov's team in Tsebelda excavations, 1978

7-23 Author with Dr. Todd Dissotel, geneticist, and Dr. Shara Bailey, anthropologist in the NY University, 2006